DAVID M. SHIELDS, Attorney, (in fact) to the Assignees and Trustees of J. SHIELDS, Chesnut-Street, No. 22. November 1, 1798. dtf. A CAUTION TO THE PUBLIC.

JOHN A. SHAEFFER, of Philadelphia, who has for a few years past been in the southern States, has had the opportunity to draw several Bills of Exchange on Timothy Pickens, Esq. Secretary of State, and myself, and by that means has defrauded a number of persons of their money, deceiving them by an exhibition of letters and papers with the names affixed of divers public characters and reputable merchants highly recommendatory of said Shaeffer; to one of these papers I find my name subscribed, but I do not know the man; there are villainous forgeries! To prevent further imposition, I have to request the printers of Newspapers in the United States to publish this for the benefit of their fellow-citizens.

Eight Dollars Reward.
A ROBBERY was committed on the 17th instant, at the house of the subscriber in the township of Solebury by two negro men—they carried off a quantity of cash; a packet book, containing no valuable papers; wearing apparel, &c.—One of the negroes is a middle aged man, known by the name of John White, formerly a resident of Philadelphia, has an impediment in his speech—the other supposed to be a runaway, about eighteen years of age, of middle stature. Whoever secures the aforesaid villains so that they may be brought to justice, shall receive eight dollars reward, or four for either of them taken separately.

A French Classical & Mathematical SCHOOL.
WILL be opened on Monday the 22d instant at that large commodious room formerly occupied by Mr. Leo in Norris's Alley, No. 15, nearly opposite the City Tavern; under the direction of Messrs. Smith and Chandler both of liberal education, and long experienced in their respective professions—As they intend under the patronage of a discerning public, permanently to establish themselves in this undertaking, their whole study and attention will be devoted to the improvement of their pupils.—These will be conducted upon the latest and most approved plans, through a complete course of academical studies, or those portions only that may be pointed out, as more immediately adapted to their particular views in life —Certain portions of their time will be allotted for geography, history, extracts, composition, and declamations in French and English, in order to form early habits of writing and speaking with propriety —Visits from parents and literary characters, tending to excite a spirit of emulation, will be gratefully received. The hours of study are from 9 to 12 A.M. and from 2 to 5 P.M.
They offer to translate the English, French, Spanish and Portuguese languages; and to draw in their proper modes and stile, all kinds of writing, whether legal, commercial, or epistolary.
The first Monday in November, they also propose to open an evening school for French, bookkeeping, surveying and navigation, of which they have a practical as well as theoretical knowledge.
As a number of French gentlemen will attend, the students of their language, by continually conversing with them, as well as their teachers, will acquire, along with the principles, a facility of expression.

AVIS AUX FRANCOIS:

MR. JEFFERSON'S ENVOY.

THE anxiety of the public has been for a long time awakened by Dr. Logan's mis-terious mission to France. Conjectures have been with the mails of the people as various as they have been unsatisfactory. The most discerning of our citizens have indeed been convinced, that his objects were of a nature the most hostile to our government, and most destructive to our happiness and independence.
They had seen a constant correspondence kept up between France and the disaffected in those countries which have since groaned under the iron rod of her oppression; they knew the aspiring views and unprincipled ambition of this restless and frantic demogogue; they were well informed of the haile and secrecy of his departure; nor were they ignorant of his long and frequent consultations with a man who, abandoned to every sense of public virtue, exerts all the faculties of his mind, and bestows all the weight of his office, upon the increase and nourishment of the influence of France. Weighty and operative as were these considerations, there were others still more so. It was remarked, that Logan failed soon after the arrival of the memorable dispatches from our envoys, when the public mind was most inflamed; when every latent spark of virtue and patriotism fired the American bosom; and when it was perceived, even by the most sanguine and inveterate of his faction, that unless a speedy change took place in the system of open coercion at that time adopted by France, the energies of our government, invigorated by the ardor of our citizens, would blight all their projects. No means could be better calculated to effect this change, than to dispatch an envoy from the body politic of Jacobinism, fully initiated into the views of its leaders, and invested with ample powers to concert such schemes as were most likely to ensure ultimate success. Their craft no sooner suggested the idea, than the folly and fanaticism of Logan furnished them with an instrument. From what has already happened, we may in some degree discover how well their opinions were founded; and as the letter published from himself in fact confesses that he has acted in a political character, his conduct is now a fit subject of public praise or condemnation.

An extract published from a Paris paper some time since informed us, that he had credentials from Jefferson and M. Kean, that he had dined with the notorious Merlin, president of the Directory, and that he was sent for political purposes by the French party in America. This publication has now been made some weeks; it must have been seen by both of the persons who are said to have created this new species of diplomatic character; they must have both known that it has excited the curiosity, and rouled the feelings of the whole nation; and that if its truth was not denied, it would be credited. From no such denial having been made, and from the intrinsic probability of the assertion, I shall consider it as unquestionably authentic. The constitution has vested in the President alone, the management of our exterior relations. To him be-longe the right of appointing public ministers, of forming treaties, and of expressing our national sentiments. The Vice-President, considered as such, possesses no other power than those which are attached to the head of a legislative body. The President then entered into a negotiation with France, as the legal representative of the whole nation; Mr. Jefferson has entered into another, as the representative of a profligate faction. Let him not attempt to justify himself by saying, that his objects coincided with those of the administration; for if he is authorized, unsolicited, without the knowledge, and, as he well knew, against the inclination of the President, thus kindly to further the completion of his wishes in this instance, it would be equally proper for him, on another occasion, to impede and obstruct them: if he is competent to send an agent to France, for the purpose of securing peace, he is no less empowered to send one to England in order to create war.
No man who is acquainted with his character, doubts that he would embark in a scheme of the latter nature, with the same readiness as he has done in the former.

The people of the United States are called upon to reflect seriously on this development. It affords an insight into the views of their most insidious foe, which he has been too crafty often to give them. They are not now surely to be told that an illegal assumption of power is most dangerous in its ultimate consequences, when least injurious in its immediate effects, and that while they may receive an apparent temporary benefit, precedent is established for the ruin of their most essential rights.

The next intelligence we received of Dr.
Logan was, that immediately upon his arrival at Paris, he made his way to the directory; that the embargo laid upon our vessels was soon after taken off; that orders were given to the French pirates, no longer to harrafs our commerce, when sailing according to the decrees of the directory.

In the letter from himself published in Saturday's Gazette, we are informed that he is about to return to this country with dispatches for our government calculated to restore harmony between the two nations; that all American vessels were released, and American prisoners set at liberty; and that the most positive assurances have been given that France is ready to extend a treaty for the amicable accommodation of all matters in dispute.

The first question which arises on reading this information is, by what means was he enabled to work this sudden change in the temper of the directory? Has it been by the recapitulation of the reasoning so often alleged to them in support of the justice of our claims, and so long disregarded? Will his warmest advocates contend that his levity and folly could throw new lights on the subject, or that if he had done so, that when coming from him (who had so long & so zealously defended those measures the legality of which he would then have been combatting) they would receive the least attention? Has it been by gratifying the avarice of the French ministers and by the practice of the infamous arts of corruption? Or has it been by assuring them that a perseverance in the policy of open force would warn the people of their danger, unite them in their own cause, baffle all the artifices of intrigue, and blatt all hopes of subjugation?

The subsequent measures of France fully demonstrate that this has been the object of his mission. If there be a sincere desire on its part to bring about a reconciliation, wherefore is it that the latest edicts of the dictatorial tyrants ascribe our defensive measures solely to British corruption? they well know that the ascription is as offensive to our government as it is wicked and false in itself. Wherefore is it that they suffer all these acts most ruinous to our commerce, to continue? The decree authorizing the seizure and condemnation of ships, carrying British merchandise, still operates; the want of a rolle d' equipage suffices still to confiscate our vessels. Why are not the agents who have sanctioned the atrocities committed upon our citizens, displaced? Can any solid peace exist while the chief grounds of our complaints remain? What is it, then, that has really been done? An embargo at Bordeaux is taken off; where, I am informed, not more than a dozen vessels were detained. Our seamen are released, whose maintenance must have created a considerable expence, without any possible advantage to France or essential injury to America and the same assurances (as we are told by the Jeffersonian envoy) given, which have long been made only to be broken. The great object of this prodigal and rapacious, perfidious and inveterate foe, evidently is to tem-porize, until she shall have accomplished the projects of her ambition in Europe; in the mean time, to obtain a new opportunity to exert the artifices by which she has hitherto but too well succeeded; and then to glut her avarice and revenge, by falling upon us when we are weakened by the loss of our commerce, disunited by faction and totally unprepared for resistance. We have a dreadful warning in the fate of other nations; we have seen their fall accelerated, and indeed produced by the treacherous baseness of their own citizens. Let us grow wise by their misfortunes. If we rush on this ad-visedly to ruin, our murmurs will be answered only by the scourge of our oppressors; and our groans by the contemptuous pity of the world.
SCÆVOLA.

WHEN Logan failed for Europe it was said that he carried with him official dispatches from the chiefs of our Jacobinical faction, and it was natural in us to believe that these dispatches were written in conformity with the real views and hopes of his party as they were detailed in the public papers devoted to this faction and in all their speeches and conversations at that time.
"You will have no peace with France while Adam and his friends are in Office." "You must repel all your obnoxious acts," "break your treaty with Britain," "eat your words," and tread back the whole length of your Federal Path, before the French will even hear you," and in all this the French are perfectly right; thus fall their traitors on all occasions, at every opportunity. Then how dare they, after so short a lapse of time, to pretend that they ever have advised the French to recede from hostilities.
As well may the United Irish pretend that they advised the French to break their promise to land in Ireland, in which case the merit would be theirs, and the honest tars of Old England must of course have been unmercifully employed; is there a wretch on earth so stupid as to believe in either of these positions? No.
Nothing could be more welcome to our French faction, than to behold an army of rapacious foreigners landing on our soil, to overturn our government and to place their leader at our head; all they are in office, they cannot wait for peace it is not in their nature—but this snuff of Logan has something in it which tells us to be on our guard and true alone can enable us to develop the full intentions of these protean parricides.

OBSERVATORY AT MALTA.
In 1784, Prince Emanuel de Rohan, grand master of Malta, caused an observatory to be erected in his superb palace in this island; and committed the care of it to the celebrated d'A-ngos, well known in the astronomical world. This gentleman immediately ordered a Quadrant to be constructed in Paris by the celebrated Mique.
As soon as the establishment was complete, he began to form a catalogue of stars, in which he made a successful progress, in consequence of the clouds fly with which that island is continually favored. He discovered several Comets which escaped the observations of all other men in England, Sweden, &c. owing to the vicissitudes of the seasons in those countries. His catalogue of Northern stars (to which want in astronomy) was very rich. It is hoped that the French, who asked to pay so much attention to science, will not deprive the learned of this medium of celestial intercourse.

FOREIGN LITERATURE.
The dangers of Patriotism, a Novel, has lately been published in Paris, by J. Lavallee, author of Cecilia, daughter of Schmet III. and other productions.—The last is thus described:— "This is the best Novel which has appeared for some time; it has the double merit of interest and stile, at once pure and ingenious. The principal situations and several of the personages recall to our minds Lovelace, and some other Actors in the immortal work of Richardson; but the contrivise of an Angelic woman, the object of the will of a monster of wickedness, whose base-ness is enveloped in a brilliant illusion, is so proper to produce a lively emotion, and offers such useful and instructive lessons, that it is not surprising a subject of that kind should be again resorted to. The author has preferred, in his personages the qualifications of the old regime; because, in the manuella he describes, there are details which seem to baffle to past times exclusively; and they are not indeed of such a nature as to give us room to reject them. There are some Novels which profess to preach up virtue, and yet, in fact, dispose their readers to be in love with vice. The moral of the book in question is as pure as it is noble."

Domestic Articles.

CHARLESTON, October 20.

The frigate off the bar is the Constitution, capt. Nicholson; not the Constellation, as mentioned in yesterday's paper.

Yesterday the Baltimore fleet of war, capt. Phillips, and the Virginia armed schooner, anchored in Rebellion Roads. Capt. Phillips came up to town yesterday afternoon. We are informed that these vessels, and the Constitution, will convey the vessels belonging to this port, now in the road ready for sea, to the Havannah.

Yesterday being the anniversary of the birth-day of the President of the United States, the armed ships in the harbor fired salutes on the occasion; and the three first troops of horse, belonging to the regiment commanded by col. Cunningham paraded in Broad-street, and afterwards went through a number of evolutions on the place of general parade.

The company of Charleston Blues, belonging to the 29th regiment of militia, also paraded. This company, and a number of other gentlemen, dined together at Williams' Coffee-House. After dinner a number of apoplectic toasts were drunk, which we are obliged to postpone till our next.

October 24.

Yesterday the vessels belonging to this port bound for the Havannah, sailed from Rebellin Road, in company with the Baltimore fleet of war; they joined the Constitution frigate with the Bar.

BRAUFORT, OCT. 7.

Departed his life, after a few days illness, Mr. Cabb Anery, a native of Norwich, Connecticut. He was an assistant to a public work at this place, and had acquired the esteem of all his acquaintances. His remains were accompanied to the grave by the brethren of the lodge here, and deposited with the usual honors of Masonry.

BALTIMORE, November 7.

To the Printers of the Federal Gazette.
Gentlemen,

I request you to give publicity to the following through the medium of your Gazette. On the 4th of September, I was captured in the snow Fanny, of Baltimore, close in with the Spanish Main, by a French privateer schooner, on board of which was a fellow of the name of John Mathers of Baltimore, who told me, in order to cover his piratical conduct, that he was only getting a passage from Lagaira to Curacao; but I soon found out that he was one of the most active of the pirate's crew. He persuaded the Captain of the privateer, that unless he confined me and my men, we should rise upon him and retake the snow. The Captain mentioned what he had told him, and ordered myself and mate to be confined in the cabin, and my men in the steerage, where we were kept so close, that the heat had nearly deprived us of existence. When arrived at Curacao, Mathers assumed great importance, and directed by his information, another French privateer instantly got under weigh, to cruise off Lagaira, for the snow Maryland of Baltimore, which he captured and brought into Curacao.

The above Mathers, Solomon Geer, and one Leacock, went out privateering on the 14th instant, in a French schooner of 10 guns. I was present when the two latter went on board, and heard them declare, that every American they captured, they would strip even of their shirts.

I wish every printer in the Union to publish the above, in order to acquaint the Commanders of all vessels belonging to the United States, of the villainy of those Jacobins.

Yours, &c.

GARRET BARRY.

Curacao, October 26, 1798.

NEW-YORK, November 10.

The President of the United States will shortly sit out for the Seat of Government. We are sorry to hear that Mrs. Adams will be unable to accompany him. We ardently hope that her convalescence, though slow, may be certain. Our worthy and illustrious President has declared to his friends, that he can meet with unshaken fortitude any event but her loss. Let every true American prefer his fervent vow to heaven for her recovery.

PHILADELPHIA,

MONDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 12.

Extra of a letter from a gentleman in Pittsburgh, to his friend in this city, dated October 19th, 1798.

"You will before this, have received the very distressing intelligence of Gallatin's re-election by a large majority. A fact which in my mind fully proves the existence of implacable hatred by the people of this country to the government. Had he not acted as he has, and had he in one single instance supported governmental measures, his election would have been doubtful; but he is popular as the chief of a party, (who are the majority). If the people can be made to understand the situation of public affairs, they of this country have not the excuse of ignorance for the utmost pains for a year past, has been taken to inform them, and enable them to weigh the consequences of every political occurrence in our dispute with France; and though they esteem Gallatin as a friend of the people, they know him and support him as the enemy of the government. An unfortunate division of the Federal interest between Woods and col. Preble Nevill, who were both candidates, though N. resigned before the election, gave great strength and boldness to Gallatin's party. However, had not this division taken place, and had General Washington even been the candidate opposed to him, I believe the Jacobin reptiles would have voted in the same manner. Of many anecdotes which this election has furnished, one is particularly worthy of notice, as shewing the state of the public mind. A gentleman of popularity at Washington, the election day, at the conclusion of a speech in a large assembly of tabled cried 'Huzza for the American cause.' Not a voice seconded him—he was alone. A scoundrel in the crowd huzzed 'for Gallatin' and it was immediately and repeatedly repeated by perhaps nine-tenths of those present. It was a common saying at many of the election districts, 'that it was time for the French to come—there were too many of King George's men in the country—his mission ought to be taken off.' In the borough of Pittsburgh there were 72 votes for Gallatin, and but one man in it acknowledges he voted for him."

XVIII. Century.

AS neither Mr. Cobbett nor his correspondents have made any attempts to controvert what I had the honour to advance on this subject, in your paper of the 8th, I must take it for granted, they have either fled the question or are preparing their minds for conviction.

I pledged myself to advance some authorities in support of my opinions: a more respectable one than Ferguson will in vain be sought for. The hundredth year he styles the centennial year; doubtless, thereby meaning, the last or closing year of the century—the year which completes the term. But he is still more decisive, clearer and stronger on this point. This astronomer, pp. 269—271, contains a catalogue of ellipses visible the present century. This period he commences with the year 1701, and concludes with the year 1800.

Moreover, Dufresnoy, who is allowed to be the most infatigable chronologist that ever lived, corrects an error into which he had inadvertently fallen, and for which it is easy to account, in the two or three first centuries of his dates, and uniformly afterwards, terminates with the hundredth year—the tenth century with the year 1000—and so on.

CERTO.

LORD BACON.

In his "Essay upon health and long life," says, that on some philosopher's being asked how he had arrived to the very advanced period of life he then was at, replied, "Intus mille, extra oleo"—by taking honey within and oil without.

MAUPERTUIS.

In one of his essays, melancholly enough, makes this conclusion:—"Mankind, (says he) however, differing in all other things, agree in this, ils ont tous cherché un remède au mal de vivre."—They have all been looking after a remedy for the misery of existence.

PASCAL.

In his "Thoughts" says, "We must all be uneasy here below:—If we are not uneasy, so much the worse for us."

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS.

When the town of Landshut, in Bavaria, surrendered at discretion, the principal inhabitants of it fell down before him, when they presented him with the keys of their town. "Rise, rise! (said he) it is your duty to fall upon your knees to God, and not to so frail and so feeble a mortal as I am."

The insignificance of a villain ought never to induce us to suppose him incapable of mischief. Many a despised wretch, of origin low, mean and vulgar, and trained in habits of baleness and servility, is yet capable of more complete and more extensive devastation than any of the greatest conquerors and tyrants who have ever oppressed mankind. How has our own time abounded in melancholy illustrations of this truth!

THE TELEGRAPH.

Is said to have been originally the invention of William Amontons, a very ingenious philosopher, born in Normandy, in the year 1663. Amontons was in the third form of the latin school at Paris; when after a considerable illness, he contracted such a deafness as obliged him to renounce all communication with mankind. In this situation he invented that mode of communication, which has since been adopted by the revolutionizers; and, with considerable improvements, is now called the Telegraph.

NEWSPAPERS.

It has been supplied from the following passage, which occurs in Tacitus' Annals, that the Romans had something like newspapers.—"Diurna populi Romani, per pro-vincias, per exercitus, curatibus leguntur; quam ut non negatur quid Thrasia fecerit."

In the city of London, there are published, thirteen daily, twenty evening, and nine weekly papers. In the country, twenty, and in Scotland fourteen.

The earliest paper known to have been published in England, was the English Intelligencer, commencing about the year 1660.

It would be worth while to bestow some attention on the progressive increase of those powerful agents in this country. If it was late before the establishment took root amongst us; it has since made up for the delay, by the most exuberant increase and extension. Within old Franklin's time, and not more than seventy years ago, there were not above two newspapers printed in America. Mr. John Dunlap, of this city, was the initiator of the first daily paper, not long before the commencement of the revolution. This was begun on a sheet of Demy size, at the rate of eight dollars per annum. It is remarkable, that in no instance has this charge been hitherto exceeded, although the daily papers have been continually encroaching in size, until those of America are now the largest in the world.

A newspaper, at the highest rate they now sell at, may justly be called the cheapest commodity of the country. At eight dollars per ann. they are little more than two-pence each. Every sheet of paper costs the printer more than a penny, and thus the subscriber receives an immense body of printing at one penny.

NEAT COMPLIMENT.

The following pretty conceived tribute to General Washington loses none of its merit from the circumstance of not being paid as intended.

Messrs. Gray and Weed, at Gray's ferry, expediting the General to pass that way, had decorated the bridge in the handsomest manner with ever-green and laurel—just emblems of the unending reverence and love of a grateful people, and of the distinguished honors which adorn the immortal Chief. It is matter of regret, that the zeal and ardor of these gentlemen, which led them to exert themselves all night, to complete the decoration, was unfortunately disappointed by the General's passing at the middle ferry, conformably to prior arrangements, which could not then be deviated from.

It is remarkable that the foreign renegades who infect this country, commence immediately on landing, their old practices of extolling the generosity, magnanimity and public virtue of the French. Wherefore is it that no one of these catfishes feels that delightful asylum of oppressed friends to liberty?

If we do not speedily close our doors upon the hordes of ruffians yearly disgorging upon us, America will ere long be converted into one vast store-house of assassins.

If the revolutionary vermin of foreign countries should continue to encrease and fatten as they have heretofore done, on the sufferings and distress of the community, it is not difficult to reflect the speedy dissolution of this immense temple of liberty, this free and most enlightened republic. Then should we see committees of public safety and revolutionary tribunals composed of Callenders, Reynolds's, Burks and Duane. The heads of rich men would roll down the kennels, while scoundrel convicts would be revelling in their chariots, or rioting in their palaces.

To this evil some effectual remedy must be applied: it is not enough that we cry "Tarda sit illa dies, et nostro serior aro." We must rouse us, betimes, to entry and action, or the slumber wherewith we sleep will be our last.

It is of little consequence to the federalists, that their enemies are less numerous than themselves, while the shameful fact exists that they make themselves more powerful by superior boldness, address and activity. In how many instances have we not seen them gain an ascendancy merely by perseverance in their endless arts of lying and intrigue, and for want of a due exertion of honest means on the part of the friends to government. It is not hazarding too much to say, that a continued prevalence of that lake-warmness and indolence of temper, which has so long excited the reproach of the federal party, must in the end prove the means of its destruction. What our enemies want in numbers; they make up in the most active intrigue; and what they want in manly spirit, they make up by dark and underhanded conspiracy. They are Jeffersons in cowardice as they are Catalines in villany. But the coward has his weapon, and often strikes the furell and most fatal blow.

Memo.—No controversy about the close of the eighteenth century to be carried on in future at my office, between the hours of 9 and 4.

J. W. F.

The following lines written under a portrait of Shakespeare, by Ben Jonson, his contemporary, have much of the pleasant quaintness of that time.

The figure that thou here seest put,
It was for gentle Shakespeare cut; Wherein the graver had a strife With nature to outdo his life.
O, could he but have drawn his wit As well in brass, as he hath hit His face; the print would then surpass All that was ever writ in brass.
But, since he cannot; reader, look Not on his picture, but his book.

The letter of Logan, published by his wife, is of some moment in one point of view, as it tends to prove, by his own word of mouth, that he actually went on the abominable errand which was suspected. This embassy, taken in all its parts, presents an unparalleled display of impudence, folly and vice: it can result only in the exposure and punishment of the actor and his contained confederates. Meanwhile the administration, with that upright and dignified spirit which has hitherto distinguished all its proceedings, regardless of the cries of the crocodile, will pursue unvaryingly its straightway course—that course which has converted menace and insult into crouching and supplication, and that can ensure safety, which, and not peace, ought to be now the prime object of our regard. Already the motley Harlequins tremble at our vengeance—already they feel and confess our power. To the foul of a frivolous Sancho Panza our cannon should convey our only address. All without is now as it should be: that Providence, which, how ever unacknowledged or denied, still holds at disposal, the destinies of thieving France, after leading us through the tyrannous oppressions of fratricide, and suffering us to be bound down under the lash of fancifulism, has at last led us to the path of honor and safety. From this path no Logan can divert us—no faction can drive us, while at the helm stands immovable as Atlas, and as unchangeable, John Adams, President of the United States, a man born for the crisis in which Providence has placed him, and dedicated to the salvation of his country, as much as Moses to that of the Israelites.

LYING PROPHETS.

The foolish de-vocates predicted, nay swore, that the spirit of America would route their matters to wath. How shallow, false, and unprofitable are all the devices of Jacobinism. They know not even what stuff themselves are made of.

The following fact, which we copy from the European Magazine, merits serious attention.

"A celebrated lecturer in Natural Philosophy says, that when he was in Virginia, he was told, that in a certain district of that province, an epidemic fever had been long used to prevail, and to attack most of the inhabitants of it, in spite of every precaution that the medical men could suggest. Some Bostonians, however, coming to settle there, (whose constant custom in their own country is to wear flannel next to the skin), it was observed that they escaped the general infection, which they imagined to be owing to their method of cloathing themselves. The inhabitants took the hint, and were never afterwards subject to their old disease."

An English writer in just derision of the mock republicanism of the French, calls them republicanets.

The immortal Milton in his answer to the Eikon Basilike, of the unfortunate Charles, thus speaks of that unhappy monarch, and his distresses: "To decant on the misfortunes of a person falling from so high a dignity (who hath also paid his final debt both to nature and to his faults) is neither of itself a thing commendable, nor the intention of this discourse. Neither was it fond ambition, or the vain desire to get a name, present or with posterity, by writing against a king."

Milton was a republican. Far different is the temper of Gallic republicanism. After cruelly butchering the best of monarchs, that bloody crew even to this hour, heap on his memory the most vile and odious slanders. In this particular your French republican is nearly allied to the Jackal.

Married, at Princeton, on Wednesday evening last by the Rev. Samuel F. Snowden, Dr. John M'Lean, professor of mathematics, chemistry, and natural philosophy, in the college, to Miss Phoebe Bainbridge, of that place.

Sixty Dollars Reward.
MADE their escape from the Guard in the ho-rough of Lancaster, on Saturday evening last, between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock, two French prisoners, part of the crew of La Croyable.

The one named Etienne Aulais, a native of Bordeaux in France, 26 years of age, about 5 feet 6 inches high, dark eyes, and complexion, by trade a carpenter, supposed to be unacquainted with the English or German language. Had on when he went away, a white hat, pantaloons, and a short jacket, tight made, and probably took with him some other clothes.

The other named Peter Dupont, a native of Boujon in France, 20 years of age, about 5 feet 8 inches high, grey eyes, dark complexion, a common by occupation, a dirty ill-looking fellow. Had on when he went away, a blue sailor's jacket, with large tow trousers, an old wool hat, speaks imperfect German.

Alto, made his escape the same day, about nine o'clock in the morning, from the same goal, a negro man named Peter Hylton, about 5 feet 4 inches high, of a sallow complexion, lately convicted of a felony in this country. Had on when he went away, a long blue coat, a pair of white trousers, both ragged, and a black hat.

Twenty-five dollars will be paid for apprehending and securing in any goal, each or either of the above named Frenchmen, and Ten dollars for the negro, by

Forty Dollars Reward
FOR APPREHENDING
A GENTLEMAN NEGRO,
BY name GEORGE or GEORGE PARKER, the property of the subscriber, who has thought proper on the night of the 21st inst. to elope from his master without any provocation or just cause;
he was formerly the property of Beckwith Butler, Esq. and lived a considerable time with Pottenger, who kept tavern in Frederickburg, having seen much company and travelled with several gentlemen through different parts of this state, he is much known. It is therefore conjectured he will push for some of the northern cities or towns as he has discovered an overland transportation work, though he may perhaps have crossed the ridge where he has a brother belonging to major Butler.
This fellow is about five feet seven inches high, well proportioned and walks active and brisk, his countenance is open and agreeable enough when in good humour; he can hardly be faulted in shrewdness, and is a very capable waiting-man, house servant, barber, &c. To describe his dress would be useless, as he possessed a variety of clothes, though when dressed lately, he wore a green coat bound with white furring and spotted jacket and "broches." Whoever brings him home or secures in goal in this or any other state, the said slave, so that I may get him again, shall have the above reward.

A GENTLEMAN NEGRO,
BY name GEORGE or GEORGE PARKER, the
proper on the night of the 21st inst. to elope from
his master without any provocation or just cause;
he was formerly the property of Beckwith Butler,
Esq. and lived a considerable time with
seen much company and travelled with several
gentlemen through different parts of this state, he
is much known. It is therefore conjectured he
as he has discovered an overland transportation work,
though he may perhaps have crossed the ridge
where he has a brother belonging to major Butler.
This fellow is about five feet seven inches high,
shrewdness, and is a very capable waiting-man,
would be useless, as he possessed a variety of clothes,
ward.

ALEXANDER VASS.
Falmouth, O.R. 23, 1798.

N. B.—Masters of vessels and Stage Drivers are requested to beware of suffering said fellow to impose on them by affixing his escape. A. V.

AN ORATION,
Pronounced July 4, 1798, At the request of the Inhabitants of the Town of DORCHESTER, in commemoration of the anniversary of American Independence.

By Josiah Quincy.

"The inroads upon our public liberty, call for reparation.—The wrongs we have sustained, call for Justice. That Reparation and that Justice, may yet be obtained, by Union, Spirit, and Firmness. But to divide and conquer was the maxim of the Devil in the garden of Eden, and to divide and enslave hath been the principle of all his votaries from that period to the present."
